Spanish in Spain

A six-week summer course in Madrid by Lakehead University's Languages Department, July 2 to August 11, 1979. This course, which carries university credit, will give you a practical, working command of the Spanish language and an understanding of today's Spain – the new Spain that has emerged since Franco died.

You will live and work with Spaniards, particularly Spanish students whose interests and concerns are similar to yours. Formal classroom sessions will be held each morning with instructors from the University of Madrid and other institutions who have experience teaching foreign students.

A busy and comprehensive program of social and cultural activities, led by Spanish student monitors, will reflect the interests of your group. You will see Spanish history and tradition, village festivals, local architecture, and traditional arts and handicrafts. You'll visit such centres as El Escorial, Toledo, Segovia and Salamanca, known for their historical and cultural importance.

Modern Spain will also be on your itinerary, with its hydroelectric developments, its automobile industry and its satellite tracking stations.

The Spanish in Spain program will be centred in Madrid, Spain's beautiful and exciting capital city of more than three million people. Located in the geographic centre of Spain, Madrid enjoys an almost perfect climate at 700 metres above sea level. You will live in a "Colegio Mayor" or University Residence. A select number of students will also have the opportunity of living with a Spanish family.

Popular festivals abound in Spain throughout the year. Giant figures, gigantes, can be seen in many of them. Those shown here are from Lérida.

The Rastro, Madrid's Flea Market, is open all week but is busiest on a Sunday morning.

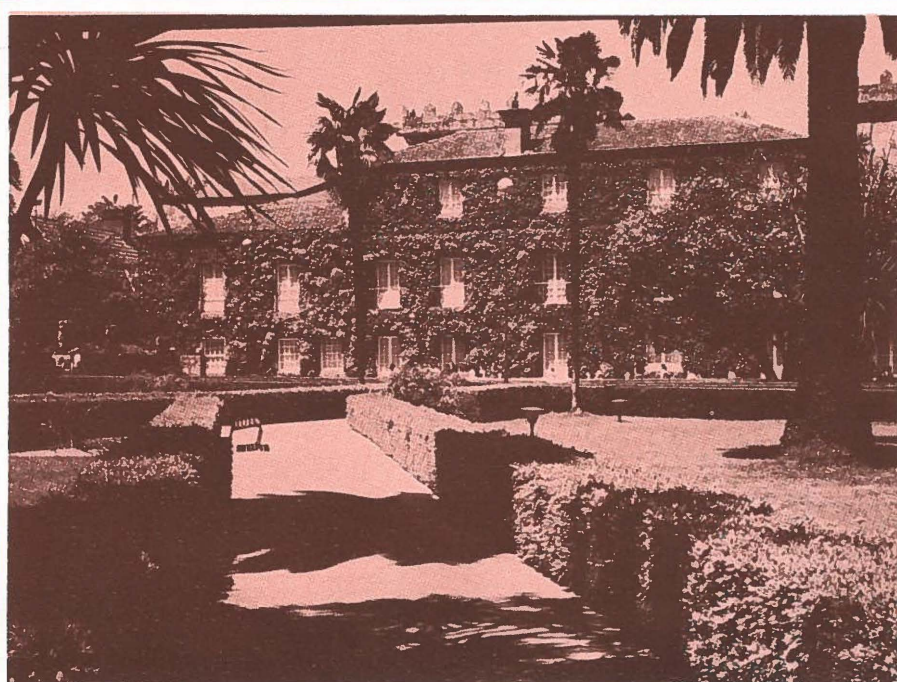

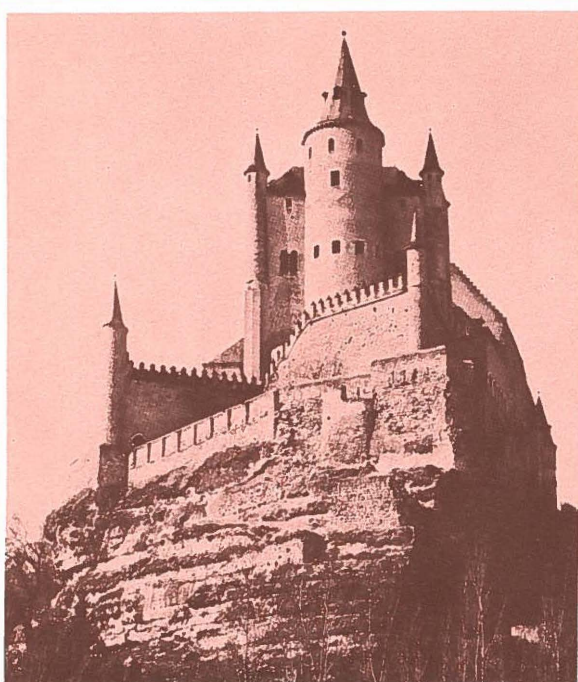

Daily routine will follow the Spanish model: classes in the morning, afternoons free, activities in the evening; breakfast 8:00 - 9:00, lunch 2:00 and dinner 9:00. Language classes begin at 9:30, Civilization at 11:30. Basic structures, vocabulary, idioms and conversational technique are presented in the morning sessions. Evening activities are informal and relaxing. They reflect the student's own interests and provide the opportunity to use Spanish in a wide variety of situations. An essential part of the Civilization course is visits to art galleries, museums, and other resource centres in Madrid.

A student tries on some unusual head-gear in a small village just outside Madrid.

The Alcázar of Segovia, one of Spain's most recognized landmarks. Segovia, like many other interesting historical centres, is only an hour and a half from Madrid by bus or train.

This solid, ivy-covered mansion in Galicia contrasts sharply with the traditional white walls and red tiles of Andalusia. In the cities, however, most Spaniards live in apartments.

Bermeo, one of the many picturesque fishing ports on Spain's northern coast. Provincial towns usually have an interesting market in the main square once or twice a week.

The baroque facade of the cathedral in Santiago de Compostela in North-western Spain. The final resting place of St. James, it was a famous centre of pilgrimage in the Middle Ages.

Four courses will be offered for credit:
Spanish 1000 - Beginning Spanish
Spanish 1200 - Intermediate Spanish
Spanish 1402 - Development of the Spanish-Speaking World
Spanish 2200 - Advanced Spanish
