Welcome Summer Students!

Lakehead University's thirteenth Summer term began on July 3 and will run through the week of August 15. A total of 1,600 students are enrolled in more than 50 courses on campus, throughout 6 communities in Northwestern Ontario, and also overseas in Spain and England.

Special summer features, in addition to the Family Life Program described in this edition, include music instruction in conjunction with Humanistic Studies, language immersion programs in French and English, final summer training for secondary school teachers, and a theatre workshop.

Free Films and Music

As a service to students in the Summer term, the Department of Extension and Summer Session is providing the best in local concert musician-ship and recent National Film Board productions free of charge.

Summer concerts scheduled for the remainder of the term will take place in the Faculty of Education Auditorium on Wednesday, July 19 and Wednesday, July 26 at 8:00 p.m. Featured from time to time in such concerts are the musicians-in-residence of Lakehead University: Douglas Dahlgren, piano; Michael Edwards, clarinet and oboe; Sidney Mann, violin and viola; Joseph Shufro, cello; and Kenneth Dearlove, brass.

Excellent National Film Board productions, usually ranging from an hour to an hour-and-a-half in length, will be shown free of charge every Monday evening at 8:00 p.m. in the University Centre Theatre.

FAMILY LIFE PROGRAM

The Family Life Program is a two-credit course designed to provide the student with a thorough knowledge of human sexuality and family living. Each year leading authorities in anthropology, sociology, philosophy, psychology, theology, physiology and child development are invited to Lakehead University as guest lecturers. Each day starts with a two hour presentation by the visiting lecturer, and this is followed by a discussion group period. Each group consists of 12 students and a trained group leader. It is during this period that students have the opportunity to consider and discuss the contents of the morning lecture. The afternoon is occupied with the evaluation of audio-visual material, and a second group meeting.

Although the course is designed primarily to train and prepare persons for the teaching of Family Life in the school, it is apparent that the course has considerable appeal to non-teachers. The course content deals with such contemporary issues as the future of the family, women's liberation, and sex and the law, as well as a review of current knowledge in such areas as human reproduction, communication in the family and contemporary theological views.

Under the directorship of Kieth Wood of the Department of Psychology, a total of fourteen guest lecturers will present up-to-date research and viewpoints on family living, throughout the summer.

The first speaker has just completed his skein of three lectures through the first week of classes in the program. Dr. Warren Schumacher of the Department of Human Development at the University of Massachusetts has turned his attention towards the topics of "Human sexuality: the language of interpersonal relations", "Maleness and femaleness: sexual identification and roles", and "Clarification of personal values: risk and creativity".

Through these topics, Dr. Schumacher has stimulated thought and discussion of the deep implications of sexuality in all aspects of human personality and interpersonal relations. He has also explored the extent to which such questions should be raised in the classroom.

REMINDER

For those who may have missed earlier announcements, "Happy Hours" have returned. Faculty and staff of Lakehead University are invited to share libations in the Faculty Lounge from 4:00 p.m. on Friday afternoons throughout the summer.

COU RECOMMENDATION

The following is an excerpt from a letter to the Chairman of CUA, setting forward the COU recommendations on graduate student fees:

It was concluded that $600 for a twelve-month year is a reasonable fee for graduate students to pay. This figure would be among the highest graduate fees in Canada, but not so far above the other provinces as to encourage widespread migration of the best Ontario students. The concept of an annual fee is considered important, because of the great merits in year-round study and year-round use of the most expensive university facilities. If the fee were established on an annual basis, there would be no need for uniformity among the universities in the actual application of fees by terms.

Our specific recommendations to CUA and the government are as follows:

- (1) that all full-time graduate students (except for post-residency students) be charged a fee of $600 a year collectible once, twice or three times during the year at the discretion of the university and that this amount be used by the government in calculating formula entitlements;
- (2) that transition to the above formula fee be accomplished according to the following schedule: * (below)
- (3) that an adjusted value of the B.I.U. for 1973-74 is preferable to an increase in fees beyond $600 or any other compensating mechanisms such as bursaries;
- (4) that if the B.I.U. value for 1973-74 is reduced, appropriate arrangements be made to protect the income of the universities likely to suffer enrolment shortfalls or to have limited numbers of graduate students.

Association Of Commonwealth Universities

The ACU promotes contact and co-operation between Commonwealth universities. To that end, the Association, which has a full-time staff of 55 at its London headquarters, works in a number of practical ways to serve the Commonwealth university community by:

- organizing in different parts of the world conferences of Commonwealth university people
- promoting the movement of staff between Commonwealth universities by helping member universities to fill vacant academic posts
- assisting the movement of students from one country to another by administering a number of scholarship schemes, including the British end of the 1,00-award Commonwealth Scholarship and Fellowship Plan
- providing factual information about universities on a Commonwealth-wide basis, through publications (especially the Commonwealth Universities Yearbook) and a personal information service.

Founded in 1913 and later incorporated by royal charter, the Association has 186 member universities in 26 Commonwealth countries (52 members in Europe, 45 in Asia, 46 in the Americas, 24 in Australasia and the Pacific, and 19 in Africa). 69 of its member institutions are in developing countries. It is the oldest international inter-university association in the world and is governed by a Council of executive heads representing member universities in the different Commonwealth countries.

The Secretary-General is Sir Hugh W. Springer and the office of the Association is at 36 Gordon Square, London, England WC1H 0PF.

Much of the work of the Association involves contact with, or providing services for, the executive heads, administrative officers and academic staff of member universities, but a significant part of the day-to-day work of the office takes the form of the provision of services for university students. These services centre round the provision of information, usually about courses, admission requirements or scholarships, and the administration of scholarship schemes.

Factual information about Commonwealth universities is provided for students in the following ways:

- through A.C.U. publications of which the best known is the annual Commonwealth Universities Yearbook. The Yearbook is meant to serve all sections of the Commonwealth university community but the A.C.U. also produced some publications intended largely or entirely for students.

- 'Higher Education in the United Kingdom', a handbook issued every two years and specially designed to answer the kind of questions that students in other countries ask about study at the higher education level in the United Kingdom.
- A new A.C.U. publication, scheduled to appear late in 1972, will describe awards for postgraduate study tenable at universities throughout the Commonwealth and open to students from other Commonwealth countries; it will be called 'Scholarships Guide for Commonwealth Postgraduate Students' and will be published in revised editions every two years.
- through a free Personal Information Service for any student who wishes to telephone, write to, or (if in London) call at the A.C.U. office at 36 Gordon Square for a talk with one of the information officers (who also edit the Association's publications). To answer some of the most frequently-asked questions in greater detail than would be possible by letter or in conversation, a number of short A.C.U. Student Information Papers have been prepared and are available on request and without charge.

The A.C.U. Bulletin of Current Documentation is published by the Association of Commonwealth Universities, 36 Gordon Square, London, England WC1H 0PF. Its main purpose is to provide the member universities of the Association, and particularly those in them who are concerned with the more general aspects of policy-making, with factual information about some of the more important books, reports, and other documents that have recently been issued on matters affecting universities and are of more than local interest. The emphasis is on publications issued in Commonwealth countries but some international and foreign documentation is also described.

The 1972 Commonwealth Universities Yearbook is the forty-ninth edition of this standard guide to university institutions in the Commonwealth. In its 2,100 pages it provides the essential facts about 240 universities, including for each a complete list of teaching staff and general information about its courses, facilities, activities and organization.

In addition to a General Index, there is an Index to the 115,000 names which appear in the Yearbook.

The Association can help any member university wishing to seek applications from outside its own country for a vacant academic post on its staff. On request the ACU will, inter alia, undertake any of the following, as instructed by the member:

advertise the vacancy in the press, mainly in the U.K.

- send announcements to universities and learned bodies in the U.K. and in other countries to central points for local distribution.
- provide further particulars of the post and of the university to enquirers who see these advertisements or announcements.
- convene in London or elsewhere an ad hoc committee of senior academics to interview short-listed candidates and subsequently report to the university (which itself decides whom to ap-
