COUNSELLING PROGRAM FOR ARTS FRESHMEN

□ The Faculty of Arts at Lakehead University begins a program of individual counselling for first year arts students early in July.

The counselling sessions will give more personal attention to the students' individual programs, particularly since the university this year is offering a revised first year program with a wide element of choice. Dean of Arts, Tim Ryan has emphasized that "the new program brings such a rich freedom of choice to the student that close consultation with and counselling by faculty members will be vital."

It is also hoped that the early counselling will alleviate the rush of registration in the fall. In the past students have been counselled during the registration procedure. This year they will be encouraged to decide their programs beforehand so that registration will only involve fee payment, student's cards and the completion of forms.

In addition to their notice of acceptance from the university, each freshman has already received a first year calendar of courses to enable him to choose his options. Now, during the counselling session, he and the faculty advisor will discuss his preferred options in order to determine a well-formulated program.

A number of first year students who are employed outside the Lakehead for the summer have already been counselled. The majority of students, however, will meet by appointment with the counsellors during the next month.

Upper year students of all faculties will also receive a form outlining their options in addition to receiving their university calendar of courses. Their timetables will be initially determined by the returned forms and any counselling they require will then take place at registration.

Counsellors will include 10 members of the academic staff, the Dean of Arts and some senior students.

The Committee on Counselling and Registration includes: D. Astwood (Economics), Dr. G. Merrill (English), J. Hilliker (History), D. Kemp (Geography), A. Cloutier (Languages), C. Ripley (Philosophy), A. Alexander (Political Science), K. Allan (Psychology), V. Wightman (Sociology), M. Greenwood (Anthropology) who is also Chairman of the Committee and Dean Ryan.

FOR FIRST YEAR ARTS

NEW CLC COURSES

□ A unique new series of 'Comparative Literature and Culture' (CLC) courses will be offered to first year Lakehead University students this fall.

Writers, thinkers and artists of various ages and cultures who have contributed to the development of western civilization will be studied in five full-credit optional courses offered by the Dept. of Languages in the Faculty of Arts. The CLC series will also provide an opportunity to evaluate interactions between literature, music and painting.

One of the courses, 'Man and His Arts', will be an ambitious, interdisciplinary course taught basically from a 'sights and sounds' philosophy. Developed by the University's Director of Music, Boris Brott, the course will consist of two series or sections running concurrently.

The first section will be made up of live lecture-concerts using various groups and special guest lecturers. Highlighting this series will be seven 'Intimacy' concerts which will be divided into three sections, each preceded by a short lecture. The first will be on the music of the era, the second on the graphic art of the era and the third will be devoted to literature.

The second section will be hourly classes devoted to technical aspects of music and involving live musical demonstrations. Each student will be familiar enough with an instrument of the string and wind families to play a simple melody by the end of the course term. The full credit course will include lectures, discussion groups and seminars in addition to films, television tapes and recordings.

A second CLC course, 'Classical Literature in Translation', offers a background knowledge of Classical Greek and Roman authors and their works. A study of mythology is included.

An 'Introduction to Russian Thought and Culture' will involve a survey of the development of art, literature and the socio-political and regional aspects of Russian history from the Kievan civilization to the end of the Tsarist rule and including Soviet political thought and scientific achievement. This course has been previously offered as Russian Civilization 2c6.

The fourth course is 'World Literary Masterpieces in Translation', a study of major works of world literature.

It is hoped that a CLC extension course in Europe will be held during the 1970 Summer School. The course, 'Themes in Western Civilization' will include visits to European countries including Belgium, France and Switzerland. Studies will concern the principles of western thought and culture as illustrated in major literary and philosophical works. Included will be studies of current problems in western civilization and their institutional framework.

COMPUTER CENTRE TO SHUT DOWN

□ The University's Computer Centre has scheduled a shutdown of approximately three weeks duration, August 4 - 23rd. This interruption is necessary to complete major renovations of the Computer Room. The shutdown is dependent upon the delivery of materials and may be altered accordingly.

The Computer Centre will provide service on a limited scale by utilizing I.B.M.'s Winnipeg Data Centre for processing production and high priority special jobs.

Anyone requiring additional information may contact Mr. W. B. McDermott, Computer Centre Manager, Ext. 408.

CAMPUS NOTES

□ Dr. Paul Barclay, Assistant Professor, Department of Biology has been awarded two research grants for studies related to northern Ontario. A grant of $1,670 from the Department of University Affairs is for a study of the environment, particularly temperature, as it relates to aquatic vegetation such as wild rice. The second grant of $3,000, from the Canadian Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, is for a study of wild rice and blueberries in the Nakina-Armstrong region to determine the economic and biological potentials of these crops.

□ Dr. K. J. Charles, Professor and Chairman, Department of Economics will be presenting a paper on "The Mechanism of Value Change in the Introduction of a New Food - An Economist's View" at a conference on "The Persistence of Food Habits" to be held between July 14 and 18, 1969 in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. The conference is being sponsored by the Engineering Foundation Research Conference in co-operation with the Agency for International Development.

□ Professor Ivor Davies of Lakehead University's Geography Department visited Toronto June 23 - 25th to confer with members of the Regional Development Branch regarding his recent research into the pattern of service provision in Northwestern Ontario. Preliminary findings were presented to an Inter-Departmental Committee of Deputy Ministers and the results will appear in an interim report to be released in the fall.

□ Poor drainage in the area between the main university buildings and the Faculty of Education building has caused many headaches for Grounds Supervisor, Bert Sitch. He hopes to have the problem "dried up" and grassed before the end of the summer.

Mr. Sitch and his crew, despite unfavorable weather, have been able to plant a wide variety of flowers and shrubs, both native and exotic about the campus. In particular, the "Quadrangle", an open area just off wing "D" in the main building is now glowing with color from a variety of roses at their peak.
